Washington state unemployment extension

If you watch the national news on a semi-regular basis, chances are you hear frequent references to the U.S. State Department. This important federal agency has its figurative hands in much of America’s interactions on the international scene.What Is the U.S. Department of State?The U.S. Department of State is the agency in charge of overseeing how and when America interacts with other countries. Responsible for managing America’s foreign affairs, the State Department is the country’s oldest executive-level agency. The foreign service officers and diplomats in the State Department oversee America’s business relations, government initiatives, immigration and individual travel issues. The State Department also oversees other federal departments’ international activities, including the Department of Homeland Security, the Defense Department, the Central Intelligence Agency and the U.S. Agency for International Development.History of the U.S. State DepartmentPresident George Washington and Congress approved legislation to establish a Department of Foreign Affairs in 1789. A few months later in September of that year, the name of this agency was officially changed to the Department of State. Duties of the agency at that time included taking the census, maintaining the Great Seal and managing the U.S. Mint. It wasn’t until many decades later that the State Department was placed in charge of foreign affairs.Thomas Jefferson was the first Secretary of State. Jefferson’s approach was decidedly domestic, preferring to focus on exploring areas of North America. Taking a neutral stance in European conflicts and concentrating on enlarging America, foreign affairs were mostly on the back burner for the country through the end of Reconstruction after the Civil War. It was in the late nineteenth century when America began taking a greater interest in the international scene, applying some force to protect international interests, notes AllGov.Responsibilities of the U.S. State DepartmentThe main responsibility of the U.S. State Department is to promote the country’s foreign policy internationally. This overarching job involves many connected responsibilities, including security measures, cultural interests, trade and commerce. The State Department works with corporations and individuals representing foreign governments, non-government organizations and private citizens.The Secretary of StateThe secretary of state is an appointed cabinet member who’s the third-highest-ranking executive branch member and also fourth in line to the office of the president. The secretary of state serves as the president’s main foreign policy adviser, also representing the United States abroad. The secretary of state sits on the National Security Council as well.Other Important U.S. DepartmentsAside from the Department of State, the president relies on other departments to carry out official responsibilities. The U.S. Department of the Treasury is in charge of printing paper currency and minting coins. The Department of Defense provides the military force required for the country’s security. The Department of Justice enforces the laws of the U.S. government. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Lo sentimos. Aún no hemos traducido esta página al español. Due to the lower unemployment rate in Washington state, the Extended Benefits program ended March 13, 2021. If you still need unemployment benefits Continue filing weekly claims if you have an active unemployment claim You might have weeks available on a regular unemployment claim. If you use eServices, you’ll know you have available weeks if you see a link that says You have a weekly claim to file. If you file weekly claims by phone, you will hear an option to file a weekly claim. Apply for a new claim Restart a claim Get help with your job search WorkSource can help you find your next job or career. Go to WorkSourceWA.com to get started. Under Resources, use the WorkSource locator to find an office near you and see what services are available virtually and in-person. If you applied for Unemployment Insurance (UI) or Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA) earlier in the COVID-19 public health emergency, you may have exhausted or are about to exhaust your benefits. These extension are not automatic, however. You will need to apply and fill out an application to receive extended support. UI lasts for 26 weeks and there are two 13-week extension programs and one 7-week extension program available: Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation and Extended Benefits (EB). PUA lasts for 39 initial weeks and one 7-week extension is available for through the EB program. Click here (Español,) to download our Extended Benefits Fact Sheet on both programs. If you started receiving UI on or after July 1, 2019 and have collected benefits for 26 weeks, you are eligible for the Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation (PEUC) 13-week extension. You will need to apply for PEUC at the end of your initial 26 benefit weeks. To apply, visit does.dcnetworks.org/initialclaims and follow the prompts. PEUC is available until December 26, 2020. You will receive the same weekly amount you received through your initial UI, unless your income has changed. Additional information from the Department of Employment Services (DOES) on PEUC is here. Extended Benefits UI users who have exhausted both their initial 26 weeks of UI benefits and their 13-week PEUC extension are eligible for an additional 13 weeks of benefits through the Extended Benefits (EB) program. Once you exhaust those first 13 weeks, you may also eligible for an additional 7 weeks of benefits through EB if there remains high unemployment levels. NEW! Following legislation introduced by Councilmember Silverman, PUA users are now also eligible for 7 additional weeks of support through EB when unemployment levels remain high. You can apply for EB at the end of your 13-week PEUC extension. To apply, visit does.dcnetworks.org/initialclaims and follow the prompts. You will receive the same weekly amount you received through UI and PEUC or PUA, unless your income has changed. EB will be available for as long as unemployment levels in the District remain higher than normal. Materials to Have Ready To begin the process of filing for unemployment benefits, you should have the following information readily available: Your social security number Your most recent 30-day employer’s name, address, phone number and dates of employment Your Alien Registration Number, if you are not a US Citizen Your DD214, if you are ex-military Your Standard Form 8 or Standard Form 50, if you are a former federal employee Severance pay information (only applicable if you did or will receive severance pay) Pension (if you have or will receive pension benefits) Click here to return to our main Unemployment page for additional resources.
